STEWART

THE FAMILY PET.

PRETTY POLLY'S bright talk has made her a favorite "FAMILY PET." In the sketch, upon the reverse side, our artist has pictured her at her best, displaying her vocabulary before an interested group. Judging from the delighted faces, she is winning new laurels with her blunt utterances; and the red-coated official is not above participating in the mirth, though her latest speech may have been at his expense.

But the application isn't in the picture, except it be in the inference: "Laughter doeth good like a medicine." Remember, now, the medicine which doeth good," is Jayne's Expectorant. When our Dr. D. Jayne first wrote this prescription for a patient—almost seventy years ago—he little thought what a boon he was conferring upon suffering humanity. It came like an elixir of life to many a desponding one, afflicted with a cold, a racking cough, shortness of breath, soreness of the breast and lungs, or with Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh; bringing back the blush of health to the cheeks of many an invalid, supposed to be suffering from Consumption; saving many a little one from threatened death by Croup; relieving in others the dangerous tension of Whooping-Cough, and proving its cure. Briefly, it is a wonderful remedy, not only for the worst of Coughs and Colds, but for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

Do you know about it? Have you used it? Has it been used in your father's family, or your own? If not, it is more than probable that your neighbors are familiar with it—have used it in their families, know its value, and will tell you their experience. Ask them.

Very truly,

DR. D. JAYNE & SON.
